The professor and his assistants have been digging in this section for some time and assert they have found several indications that the region was once inhabited by a forgotten race. Both skeletons appear to be well preserved. The bones are rough denoting great strength. The skulls are flat and both possess a perfect set of teeth of unusual size.

It is Mr. O'Malley's contention that he has not waived immunity.

When Commissioner O'Malley and his subordinate, Superintendent Malloy, refused to waive immunity on Wednesday the two market officials were served with new subpenas.

Instead of being indorsed "The Case of the People vs. John Doe," these subpenas were marked, "Maiter of the inquiry into the alleged wiliful and corrupt misconduct in office of public officials in the County of Kings."

It is Mr. Ruston's contention that under the new subpenas of being will be held amenable to any action that may result from the Grand Jury investigation.

Before he entered the jury room, Mr. O'Malley said:

"I have no objections to going before the Grand Jury. I am anxious to tell whatever I know but I will not sign a waiver of immunity on advice of counsel."

When he emerged later, he said:

It developed that Ferraro was scheduled to arrive in Boston yesterday to testify against six Italians now being tried there for the murder of Michael Scarpone in front of his home on Unity street. The three arrests made in Boston and that of Giuseppe Fforino and Albert Anastasio, both of 155 Sackett street on suspicion of knowing something about the Ferraro killing are expected to disclose the inner workings of the Black Hand.

Another important arrest for a murder in Brooklyn was made in Bridgeport. Conn., yesterday when Edward Young, of 884 Broadway of that borough was taken into custody after which he made a confession saying he had shot James Orlando on the corner of Humboldt and Skillman streets on Wednesday night. The police here believe that Orlando was shot because of a girl with whom both were in love.
